Virginia Constitutional Amendment to Destroy and Redefine Marriage

This measure would:

- Repeal Virginia's current language that says that marriage is between one man and one woman. Virginia's lawmakers are attempting to redefine God's design for marriage, which is sacrilegious.
- Redefine marriage as lawful between "two adult persons" regardless of "sex and gender." This redefinition not only applies to same-sex couples but also recognizes marriage as legal between those who claim to be transgender.
- Permit religious organizations and clergy to refuse to perform these weddings. It does not say anything about permitting businesses to refuse to provide services to these weddings based on religious beliefs. This lack of clarification could force Christian schools and businesses to face legal action if they do not recognize these "marriages."

VIRGINIA'S CURRENT MARRIAGE LAW:

"Same-sex" marriage is currently legal in Virginia. However, this amendment would redefine marriage in Virginia's constitution as no longer just between one man and one woman and would define it as the legal union of two consenting adult persons.

CHRISTIANS MUST VOTE NO ON THIS MEASURE.

God established marriage; man cannot redefine it.

Christians must vote NO on the Virginia Marriage Amendment

God ordained marriage as a committed union between one man and one woman, where the “two become one” (Genesis 2:24).

Both Old Testament and New Testament scripture specifically define marriage as between one man and one woman (Mal. 2:13–15, Matt. 19:4–6; Eph. 5:22–33).

In the covenant of marriage, the sexual act for the couple is both love-giving and life-giving. Same sex “marriage” cannot be procreative.

Sacred scripture presents homosexual acts as acts of grave sin (Genesis 19:1-29; Romans 1:24-27; 1 Corinthians 6:10; 1 Timothy 1:10).

Christians must treat people living homosexual lifestyles with compassion and respect. However, they are not to affirm the sinful acts of these lifestyles.
